Investnet Strengthens Integration with National Advisors, Delivering Unified Wealth Management Platform to Banks & RIAs

RIAs Given Easier Access to National Advisors for Trustee Services, while Community Banks can Harness Investnet Offerings to Obtain Greater Scale & Efficiency for Wealth Management Businesses

CHICAGO—October 18, 2016—Investnet, Inc. (NYSE: ENV) has deepened its integration and relationship with National Advisors’ family of companies—including National Advisors Trust Company, FSB; National Advisors Trust of South Dakota, Inc.; National Advisors Concierge Services; and National Advisors Holdings, Inc.—making it possible for banks, independent trust companies, and RIAs alike to benefit from a unified wealth management offering.

“Every technology update we make to our fully integrated platform is designed to empower wealth managers to become ‘essential advisors’ who can deliver better outcomes for their clients,” said John Yackel, Executive Managing Director and Head of Institutional Business Development at Investnet. “Furthermore, RIAs and broker-dealers planning to offer trust services can harness our unified offering to seamlessly and efficiently manage all aspects of their business divisions through a single solution. There has been a rapid convergence of advisory, brokerage, and trust services in this industry, and this partnership and integration offer a unique business solution combining best-in-breed investments and custody services as part of a unified approach to wealth management.”

Banks have traditionally operated their broker-dealer and bank trust businesses in different legal silos. This has led to an inconsistent experience for advisors and investors, and prevented banks from consistently delivering advice across their institutions. Investnet’s technology advancements and acquisitions over the past several years have created a unified platform whereby banks can now provide a seamless experience for clients across their broker-dealer, advisory, and trust divisions.

Investnet’s flexible and agnostic framework includes the capability to easily integrate with multiple trust accounting systems, custody, and trading platforms. Investnet’s enhanced integration with National Advisors builds on this progress, providing a single end-to-end wealth management platform for banks, independent trust companies, and RIAs that handles oversight, compliance support, and trading tasks as well as portfolio management and financial planning.

“Our integration with National Advisors delivers a high-value strategic solution for banks and advisors,” continued Mr. Yackel. “The combination of National Advisors’ nationwide reach, multi-jurisdictional trust powers, and objective, private label corporate-directed trustee model with our technology, and the inherent efficiencies and economies of the integration, can help solve many challenges and open the door for enhanced operational excellence.”

Bank wealth management organizations that advise clients, manage portfolios, oversee client relationships, coordinate trust services, or develop new businesses can all leverage the combined platform’s solutions, including:

- Integrated financial planning

- Data aggregation
- Investnet's Investor Suite, which delivers access to Investnet | Yodlee's financial wellness solutions
- Portfolio management and overlay trading tools
- Investment policy rules and compliance oversight
- Client reporting and performance measurement
- Custodian-agnostic integrations
- Branded administrative trust services in a corporate-directed trustee model

“Working together with Investnet creates a powerful solution for banks and RIAs,” said Jim Combs, President and CEO of National Advisors Holdings, Inc. and its affiliates. “With Investnet’s high-performance wealth management platform integrated with our independent, nationwide trust services and solutions—and the combined offering delivered in a corporate-directed trustee model—our two organizations greatly complement each other.”

As part of the deeper integration, advisors that rely on National Advisors will be able to access trust services through Investnet’s platform. The combination of seamless, unified access to Investnet for investment decisions with National Advisors’ trust services and investment processing solutions will enable wealth management businesses to provide a consistent experience for clients. In addition, Investnet’s ability to integrate with multiple custody and trading platforms allows RIAs to leverage Investnet to obtain trustee services for their clients through National Advisors.

“Offering trust services that provide even a modest financial return can be challenging for community banks and independent trust companies,” continued Mr. Combs. “This integration enables us to deliver a solution that improves the cost structure and risk profile of trust departments, while also providing them with a strategic business model that combines all wealth management functions on a single platform. We look forward to working with Investnet to provide our integrated solution to other financial institutions that have or are looking to provide trust services.”

A recent white paper commissioned by Investnet and compiled by Aite Group found bank and bank trust advisors that benefit from functional integration across all their business technology applications, as well as the automatic sharing of data between those applications, can shift about 20% of their time from operations to client engagement. This can lead them to generate 76% more revenue than their counterparts with basic or no integration.
